VILLAGE HALL COMMITTEE.

Are you interested in helping to plan and organise events at the Village Hall?

We need more committee members so we can plan events like quizzes, a Christmas Fair and coffee and cake mornings.

It wouldn't take up much of your time, we have a short meeting every 2 or 3 months.

The next meeting is this Thursday 26th Feb at 7.30 pm in the village hall. If you would like to help keep our village hall going, please come along and have a chat or drop me a message.

Did You Know.....that 100 years ago in March 1926 - The Royal Commission on the Coal Industry recommended a 13.5% reduction in miners' wages, the withdrawal of government subsidies, and reorganisation of the industry. The original Shakespeare Memorial Theatre in Stratford-upon-Avon was destroyed by fire. A national appeal for its rebuilding was launched shortly after. King George V granted a royal charter to the University of Reading, making it the only new university institution established in the UK during the interwar period. The first telephone call between London and New York was successfully completed.

Know the five signs you're dating a romance scammer
Romance fraudsters stole £119.6m in 2025!

1. An entirely online relationship

Meeting someone online is normal. What's not, however, is the relationship existing entirely online and you never meeting up with them in person, not even via a video call. This should raise a red flag, especially if a significant amount of time has passed. Romance fraudsters typically use stolen images of real people, or increasingly, AI-generated images to pretend to be someone they're not, so this should be treated with suspicion.

2. Using stolen images

Fraudsters carry out romance scams by creating fake personas, and part of that persona involves images of real or fake people. Which? has conducted previous research which found victims whose pictures had been used countless times in romance scams to lure in other unsuspecting victims. With AI scams on the rise, scammers are also generating entirely fake images of people to use in their schemes.

You can use Google image search to trace images of people to other places on the internet, or a tool like TinEye – just upload the screenshot and see if the image belongs to someone else.

3. Overly dramatic stories

Anyone that you're speaking to online who always has something devastating happen to them – from losing access to their bank account to experiencing several bereavements to having their home burgled – should raise alarm bells. During the grooming process, fraudsters will attempt to elicit empa-

Cont...

This is also done to build an emotional connection with you, making you more likely to provide financial help when they ask.

4. Offering investment opportunities

Once they've earned your trust, the scammer may change the conversation using claims that they can help you make easy money through exclusive trading offers or investment opportunities.

5. Asking for money or gifts

This is typically the end result of the scam. Eventually, when the scammer has you convinced that you're in a real romantic relationship, they'll use one of their stories to persuade you to part with your money. Sometimes, fraudsters will ask you for several amounts of money over time under the guise of various fake scenarios. Alternatively, the scammer may ask you to move money for them by using your bank account to transfer money into and then out of again. This is a form of money laundering where a scammer uses 'money mules' to move illicit cash.

What to do if you've been targeted by a romance scammer?

If you think you could be speaking to a romance scammer on a dating app or a social media website, you should report the profile to the platform using its in-app reporting tools. You may find you need impartial support too, both Mind and Victim Support offer support services for those affected by these crimes. If you lose any money to a scam, call your bank immediately using the number on the back of your bank card. You should also report it to Report Fraud (formerly known as Action Fraud).
